The Black Land

By Joseph Warren Beach

I will plough the land, Turning up the black soil. I will ride upon this heaving surface As a boat rides upon the water.
Even as a boat Cleaving the water with an eager keel, I have run a furrow¹ Straight across the ridges.

I will sow down this field,
Scattering gems.
With both hands will I scatter
Quivering emeralds out of a bottomless pouch.

As I tread the loam² My feet sink deep. The black earth embraces my ankles And clings to my bent knees.

I sing as I go
Scattering emeralds.
The wind sings upon my lips,
And pearls stream off my neck and forehead.
I am bathed in a sweat of pearls.

Eyes straight forward
Rest on a brightening ultimate slope.

Operating Room

By John Reed

Sunlight floods the shiny many-windowed place, Coldly glinting on flawless steel under glass, And blaring imperially on the spattered gules¹ Where kneeling men grunt they swab the floor.

Startled eyes of nurses swish by noiselessly,
Orderlies² with cropped heads swagger like murderers;
And three surgeons, robed and masked mysteriously,
Lounge gossiping of guts, and wish it were lunch-time.

Beyond the porcelain door, screaming mounts crescendo³—
Case 4001 coming out of the ether,
Born again half a man, to spend his life in bed.
